

Mrs. Stillman Expects Photos To Aid Her Case

Defense Will Submit Prints in Plan to Show Witnesses Could Not Look Into Room at White Farms

Beauvais Uses Camera

Finds Low and Her Attorney Contemplates Asking for an Additional Allowance

From a Staff Correspondent

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—Witnesses for Mrs. Stillman at the Canadian hearings in the divorce proceedings brought by James A. Stillman have been brought from remote parts of the province by Fred Beauvais, the guide, who is named as correspondent in the case, and are expected to contradict the testimony of Mr. Stillman's French-Canadian witnesses as to occurrences at the Stillman camp on the St. Maurice River.

One of them is a young woman who was employed at White Farm, on the Stillman estate. She says that Mrs. Stillman was not in the house on the day that witnesses for Mr. Stillman testified they saw her there with Beauvais. The house was empty and locked on that day, she says.

Photographs taken by Beauvais and by a photographer of this city will be introduced in an attempt to prove that it is impossible for any one to obtain a view of the room Mrs. Stillman and the guide are said to have occupied from the position the witnesses said they had.

Another of Mr. Stillman's witnesses whose testimony is to be attacked is Ferdinand Paige, who said that when Mrs. Stillman and Beauvais started for Little Wygamana Lake, near Grand Anse, in December, 1916, they told him they were going to stay in one of the small club camps on the shore of the lake. Witnesses have made affidavits that the camp referred to by Paige was occupied at the time and that Mrs. Stillman stayed at the main camp.

Paige and Harry Grennon in their testimony for Mr. Stillman told of seeing Mrs. Stillman and Beauvais in one of the rooms of the St. Maurice River camp from a scaffolding on which they were at work. Some of the new witnesses say that carpenter work on the building was completed three weeks before the date named, and Beauvais will try to introduce dated photographs showing the progress of work on the building.

Boatmen who took Mrs. Stillman up and down the St. Maurice on her visits to the camp will be called as witnesses and are expected to testify that the records they kept of her visits do not correspond as to dates with testimony concerning her presence at the camp which has been given by witnesses for her husband.

A French-Canadian has been selected as local counsel for Mrs. Stillman and for the last two days has been conferring with John E. Brennan, her chief counsel, and with John E. Mack, guardian for Guy Stillman, whose legitimacy is questioned in Mr. Stillman's action. No commission has been appointed, however, to take the testimony here.

The large sum allowed for defense of the suit by Supreme Court Justice Hirschauer is almost exhausted and Mr. Brennan expects to apply to the court soon for a further allowance. Mrs. Stillman herself probably will not appear at the hearings here, her friends having advised her not to.
